Jerry LaGore's Personal Website

My personal website is a visual and interactive interpretation of my resume that is meant to be viewed by recruiters or those interested in learning more about me.

This personal website provides an all-encompassing view into everything I have done professionally and educationally. The intended audience are recruiters, coworkers, and anyone who happens to stumble across my resume where it is linked. Within the site, one can find some personal information and background about me, my educational history, and all my work experiences. After seeing my site, the goal is for the audience to have a 10,000-foot view of myself.
